

London media company creates meeting room with glass moveable wall

Mediabrand is a group of 13,000 media and marketing specialists in over 130 countries on a mission to ensure their clients win in the marketplace. Through its portfolio of brands, and culture of collaboration, the firm offers the media and marketing capabilities it takes to invest smarter and grow its client's businesses now and in the future.

At the Mediabrand office in London's Old Bailey, Style worked with MCM Architects and contractor, 8 Build, to create a flexible meeting room next to a large community and circulation space.

Choosing a Dorma Huppe Variflex glass moveable wall, the meeting room can be divided from the rest of the space with ease whilst retaining visibility and an open plan feel.

With a 52dB acoustic rating, meetings can be hosted without outside interference and the inclusion of the two fully glazed pass doors enable the moveable wall to remain in place for extended periods creating a more permanent meeting room.

"We are seeing very strong demand for glazed moveable wall systems," said Julian Sargent, Style's group managing director, "because companies are looking to enjoy adaptable office space whilst retaining that open plan working environment."

"At Mediabrand, the black painted frames on this moveable wall complement the interior design of the room perfectly, and the semi-automatic operation of this Dorma Huppe moveable wall makes it simple to open and close, with the acoustic seals being applied to the perfect pressure each time."

Style is the UK's exclusive partner to Dorma Huppe, Skyfold and SWG offering a broad portfolio of solid and glass moveable walls for all requirements and budgets.

Its glass operable wall range offers acoustic and non-acoustic systems for a wide range of market sectors – including corporate, hospitality, education, healthcare, religion, local authority, retail, sports arenas, airports and high rise city centre winter gardens.
