

SOUND ABSORPTION PARTITIONING FROM STYLE

STYLE

The British Council has moved into a creative new office facility in Sg, an 'Outstanding' BREEAM-rated building in the International Quarter London (IQL). Prioritising the adaptability of available space, partitioning expert Style was brought in early to work with 5plus Architects and main contractor, BW Interiors. As a result, the expansive ground floor concourse benefits from seven bespoke, 5m-high Dorma Hüppe movable wall elements. Operating on a complex tracking layout, they can be used to form an innovative display screen, to create individual exhibition boards, or to screen the cafe from the conference suites. One side of the panels is finished with magnetic, writable laminate, encouraging casual meetings where teams can collaborate and share ideas, whilst the other side includes an Autex board, providing essential acoustic sound absorption in this high-ceilinged space. Elsewhere, Style installed a further eight Dorma Hüppe 60 dB semi-automatic movable wall systems, creating various-sized meeting spaces.
